Please note:

Thalassaemia Minor

Thalassaemia Minors do not pose any risk to themselves. They pose a risk to their future child, and that too only if the spouse is also a Thalassaemia Minor. We would suggest that a Counseling Session be fixed for the Thalassaemia Minors, as early as possible. You could inform us of the date for Counseling. Even before the counseling, it may be necessary to reassure the individuals that there is nothing wrong with their physical being. Our leaflet "What must you do if you are a Thalassaemia Minor?" is attached to the Report of the concerned individuals.

Iron Deficiency Anaemia:

These are cases where the haemoglobin count was less than 11 gm/dl. The haemoglobin count in the range 10 to 11 gm/dl may be classified as 'Mild Anaemia', whereas if below 10 gm/dl may be considered to be 'Anaemic'. In any case, the Report may be shown to the family doctor.

Clotted Samples:

The clotting may have occurred due to improper mixing of the anticoagulant in the test bulb. Very obviously, this has got nothing to do with the physical being of the Individuals. These individuals will have to repeat the test at the next opportunity.

The CBC report may throw a light on certain other aspects which do not relate to Thalassaemia. It would be advisable for the individuals to show their report to the family doctor.
